

Rotating solar panel manufacturer

Overview

Ground mounted solar installations can use solar trackers to tilt the angle of solar panels throughout the day, maximising generation. They are typically used in large scale commercial or utility projects - not residential. With a static system, sunlight hits the panel at a varying angle - called the angle of incidence - throughout the day. The narrower the angle of incidence, the higher the output. So with a single axis system moves the panels through one range of motion. The axis is typically oriented north-south, so the solar panels can tilt east through west as the sun rises and sets. A. Let's compare the output of an optimised single axis tracking system to a fixed system in London (both 10kWp): As you can see, there is one point around midday when the static system's output is at its peak. Overall, you can achieve an average output increase of 20-25% with a single axis tracker. With a dual axis tracker, expected increase is another 5-10% on top of that, but this rarely justifies the extra cost.

Are rotating("sunflower") solar panels energy effective?

A one square meter solar panel produces ~150 Watts of power. 25% of 150 Watts is 37.5 Watts. A tiny servo motor (what you would need for a 1 meter solar panel) definitely uses less power than that, especially when it only needs to be on for a few seconds every hour or two. So you would get far more additional energy than the motor uses.
